I Am a Cat is a satirical novel written in 1905–1906 by Natsume Sōseki about Japanese society during the Meiji period; particularly, the uneasy mix of Western culture and Japanese traditions. Sōseki's title, Wagahai wa Neko de Aru, uses a very high-register phrasing more appropriate to a nobleman, conveying grandiloquence and self-importance. This is somewhat ironic, since the speaker, an anthropomorphized domestic cat, is a regular house cat of a teacher, and not of a high ...

"I'm a Cat" is the very thick book (550 pages) of Natsume Sosky. This is a satire that is presented entirely to the reader as three very long stories that reveal the daily routine of a Japanese person at the beginning of the previous millennium (the book was first published in 1905). The stories are all told from the cat's point of view and describe everyday situations amusingly and pleasantly ...

The cat's master is undoubtedly Soseki himself, whom Cat describes as a selfish, dispeptic, mustachioed dimwit who doesn't know his own children's ages. (The fact that Soseki was writing and publishing as many as four books a year while suffering from serious stomach ailments that would kill him only twelve years later are beyond the cat's comprehension.) The rest of the household doesn't fare ...
